

JOHNS HOPKINS
BLOOMBERG
SCHOOL of PUBLIC HEALTH

Center for Teaching and Learning with Technology

Laura Herrera, MD
Deputy Commissioner of Health and Chief Medical Officer
Baltimore City Health Department

Dr. Laura Herrera is the deputy commissioner of health and chief medical officer for the Baltimore City Health Department. In these roles she provides direct oversight to the following divisions: clinical services, chronic disease prevention and emergency services which include acute communicable diseases and emergency preparedness. In addition, she maintains an adjunct staff position at Johns Hopkins Hospital, where she continues to care for patients in the hospital's Moore Clinic.

Dr. Herrera is a graduate of SUNY Downstate Medical School and the family medicine residency training program at the University of Maryland. She completed her Masters in Public Health and Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health.